DISCUSSION:

The North Carolina Farm Bureau held regional meetings in March to inform members of the Bureau's mission and goals for the upcoming year. Mr. Wooten, Executive Director, talked about advocacy and how the Farm Bureau shapes policies and decision. It was very informative and provided useful information on how to form a partnership with them.

Throughout this month, several discussions and meetings have taken place to develop a strategy to complete the stall barn project at the Southeastern Agricultural Center in Lumberton, NC. The current funds fall short on dollars to totally complete the project. A suggestion was made that we withdraw the stalls from the project, simply build the cover building and then let the NCHC Foundation try to purchase/donate the 100 stalls. This would still leave the project short on funds and without providing electricity or water to the barn. No option is ideal and discussions are on-going. Two possible plans of action include asking for state appropriated dollars during the short session or applying for additional grant funds from the Golden Leaf Foundation and the United States Equestrian Foundation. These options are also being pursued.

Planning for the NETC conference is nearing completion. The "rolling" conference schedule is almost complete with three very diverse stops. Robert Eversole, the Trailmeister, will be the rolling conference host. The majority of speakers have been confirmed with a good mix of talent from both west and east of the Mississippi! An agreement was made between the NCHC and AQHA regarding marketing materials. In place of providing direct dollars in support of the conference, AQHA will be designing all of the conference print materials and providing other advertising assistance to promote the conference. American Trails has also offered marketing assistance.

Our first trail horse challenge was held in Franklinton, NC. The challenge was well attended and several new faces participated. There are a series of 8 challenges scheduled.

Finally, the Mason Point Trail Project will be moving forward. This will be an opportunity to construct a 12 mile loop trail in the Jordan Lake area on Wildlife Resource Land. Barb Oslund will be taking the lead on this project.
